Brief Description:

In education have included new-age pedagogies and integration of technology, the pandemic brought forth another aspect critical to student development and growth: Value-based education. It made us realise the need to enable students to navigate challenges, cope with rejections, move forward in the face of adversity, care for their communities and the planet.

The National Education Policy (NEP) also emphasises the need to integrate value-based education into a student-centric curriculum. In a complex and constantly evolving world, values such as resilience, integrity, and humility are now more important in professionals and leaders across organisations. The aim of education must be more than just preparing the youth for the work ecosystem. It needs to equip them with the values to become responsible, compassionate citizens. We must enable students to want to work towards and contribute to a sustainable community, environment and planet. With this purpose Department of Commerce has organised a guest lecture on Intelligence skill with NILAYA FOUNDATION (A Trust), are working on Youth Development.
